If the total weight is not over the gross weight, court can reduce the charge to misload and reduce fine. Misload fines are around $92. This may be the reason 2005 fines were so much lower.

Note: Fines collected are higher than ever this year. Trend is up for Grand Total.
 The State now requires a driver convicted of drunk driving to pay $2000 to State Dept. of Treasury.
 Failure to pay this added fine to the State results in loss of driver's license. Courts try to keep fines up, but they are faced with the fact that in poor economic times, people may have to choose between paying that $2000 and the local fine - or ask for the local fine to be community service.
 Loss of driver's license may mean loss of employment.
